The Washington Times, concluded its three-part series, entitled the "Big Government Series," today with an article: "Is limited government passe?"

Rep. Mike Pence, Indiana Republican, who has opposed many of the Bush Administration's signature big-spending packages, such as No Child Left Behind, the 2003 Medicare reform and most recently the economic rescue plan, said the conservative values of most Americans "haven't been given a voice" at the White House or on Capitol Hill.

However, Mr. Pence said, the fact that Mr. McCain is within striking distance of Mr. Obama is "evidence of the resilience of these conservative ideals."

"If [Mr. Obama's] liberalism was connecting with the majority of the American people, he'd be ahead by 30 points," Mr. Pence said.

The rest of the article can be found HERE .